

Acknowledgements

Writing about scaling up was a challenging experience for all the authors who contributed to this publication. We deeply appreciate their willingness to engage with the complex subject matter and to participate in the multiple revisions necessary to highlight the key insights that emerged from their experiences. None of this would have been possible without the opportunity to meet in the serene and peaceful environment of the Rockefeller Foundation's Bellagio Study and Conference Center, for which we and all the authors are extremely grateful. The two team residencies and the conference held there gave participants the opportunity to take time out from their busy schedules to reflect, to exchange ideas, and to write, review and rewrite their contributions to this book. The beauty and comfort of the Bellagio Center and above all the gracious and supportive hospitality of Gianna Celli and the staff made a special contribution to our ability to be productive. We are also appreciative of the financial support received from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the MacArthur Foundation, the World Health Organization and the University of Michigan. Many individuals have reviewed the chapters and assisted with multiple revisions. Marge Berer's insightful review of the papers challenged us to push the presentation and analysis to the next level; Alexis Ntabona's supportive guidance in the rewriting assured us that we were on the right path, and Max Heirich's unfaltering willingness to help with a broad range of tasks sustained us throughout. We also thank Amanda Abbott and Joanna Drescher for their excellent research assistance.

Ruth Simmons

School of Public Health, University of Michigan
Ann Arbor, Michigan, USA

Peter Fajans

Department of Reproductive Health and Research
World Health Organization, Geneva
Switzerland

Laura Ghiron

School of Public Health, University of Michigan
Ann Arbor, Michigan, USA